Scott is a trusted business and legal advisor with more than 35 years of experience helping his clients achieve their business goals through dispute resolution. As a Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers, Scott has substantial experience resolving disputes across industry through negotiation, mediation, arbitration and trial. He has a national practice, representing clients in state and federal courts and arbitral tribunals across the United States.

Scott represents both plaintiffs and defendants in litigation. He has obtained multi-million dollar jury verdicts and arbitration awards for corporate clients and, similarly, has successfully defended such cases. His practice includes securities and class action litigation and complex contract disputes in industries such as energy, construction, financial services, insurance and manufacturing. He defends institutions and corporate directors in cases challenging their business judgment or business practices. He also defends companies facing employment-related claims, including claims involving non-competition and non-solicitation covenants and issues arising from employment agreements. Scott also has experience defending insurers against claims of bad faith.

Scott evaluates cases for clients in terms of how a trial or arbitration might unfold and leads teams through trial. In addition, he enters other cases mid-stream where his experience helps the firm's clients. From time to time, he serves as litigation coordinating counsel for companies seeking improvement in service value and cost control. For example, during the Great Recession, Scott relocated for several years to the firm's San Francisco office to manage the high volume of mortgage cases there, including class and mass actions.

Scott complements his practice by serving as a commercial arbitrator for the American Arbitration Association. He regularly advises clients and colleagues
