BIOGRAPHY

Paul Sudentas is an associate in the firm's New York office. Paul's practice is focused on building and maintaining relationships with emerging and established companies in a variety of industries, such as healthcare, life sciences, technology, manufacturing, retail, food and beverage products, marketing and advertising, equipment, and consumer goods. He regularly advises clients on a variety of transactions, including Software as a Service (SaaS) agreements, NDAs, pre-clinical/clinical study agreements, supply agreements, distribution agreements, confidentiality agreements, third-party manufacturing agreements, staffing supplier agreements, and licensing agreements as well as primary business deals of start-up companies and M&A transactions.

Paul also advises clients on data privacy and security matters including applicability of U.S.-based states laws, such as the California Consumer Privacy Act, and works with clients to develop and navigate complex data privacy and security regimes.

In addition, Paul has experience representing clients in complex, high-stakes intellectual property litigations from pre-suit due diligence through appeals as well as post-grant proceedings before the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. He has represented companies of all sizes from start-ups to international corporations in the pharmaceutical, medical device, and chemical industries, among others.

Before entering law school, Paul was a research coordinator for pre-clinical and clinical studies on tuberous sclerosis complex at Harvard's Brigham & Women's Hospital.

FTC Says that One Cannot Retain the Fruit of the Tainted Tree

Setting new precedent in the world of data, the FTC has found that the work product of ill-gotten data is no longer retainable by the developer. On January 11, 2021, the U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC) announced that it reached a settlement in its enforcement action against Everalbum, Inc. ("Everalbum"), the developer of the "Ever" photo storage application (In the Matter of Everalbum and Paravision, Commission File No. 1923172). While the FTC has entered into dozens of such settlements over the prior two decades, the Everalbum settlement is unique as it appears to be the first settlement in which the FTC has required the deletion of intellectual property developed using data obtained in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act (Act), in addition to the data itself. In particular, and in addition to requirements commonly seen in other FTC settlements (including broad notice, consent, and deletion requirements), t...
