

News

BROOKS IN 'FORBES' ON NOMINATION OF NEW OSHA HEAD

Apr 13, 2021

St. Louis Partner Erin Brooks was quoted April 12 by Forbes (republished by Forbes on Oct. 26) regarding President Joe Biden's nomination of Doug Parker to head OSHA, and what it might mean for business leaders. Parker is now the chief of California's Division of Occupational Safety and Health; previously, he served in the Obama administration as deputy assistant secretary for policy in the Department of Labor's Mine Safety and Health Administration and was a member of the Biden-Harris transition team that focused on worker health and safety issues. Brooks told the publication that Parker's nomination "... would fill a several year void in OSHA, which did not have a Senate approved Assistant Secretary in the Trump administration. That vacancy led to lower enforcement activity – something we expect will be quickly reinstated once OSHA leadership is restored, resulting in more inspections and OSHA scrutiny. We expect the initial initiatives will continue to focus on Covid-19 in view of the Inspector General's February 2021 report offering sharp criticism of OSHA's management of COVID-19."

RELATED CAPABILITIES

- Environment
- Health & Safety
- Employment & Labor

MEET THE TEAM

Erin L. Brooks

Chicago / St. Louis

erin.brooks@bclplaw.com

+1 312 602 5093

This material is not comprehensive, is for informational purposes only, and is not legal advice. Your use or receipt of this material does not create an attorney-client relationship between us. If you require legal advice, you should consult an attorney regarding your particular circumstances. The choice of a lawyer is an important decision and should not be based solely upon advertisements. This material may be “Attorney Advertising” under the ethics and professional rules of certain jurisdictions. For advertising purposes, St. Louis, Missouri, is designated BCLP’s principal office and Kathrine Dixon (kathrine.dixon@bclplaw.com) as the responsible attorney.