BIOGRAPHY

Léa joined BCLP as an associate in the Litigation and Investigations Department in February 2022. Her practice focuses on assisting and defending French and international companies, including major financial institutions as well as large industrial and commercial groups, in commercial litigations both in the pre-litigation and litigation phases.

She also advises French companies and their foreign subsidiaries on compliance issues through internal investigations and the implementation of anti-corruption procedures, as well as on corporate social responsibility issues.

Léa is a graduate of the LL.M program in International and European Business Law of Trinity College Dublin, Ireland. She holds a master's degree in International Business Law from the University of Toulouse 1 Capitole and a degree from the European School of Law of the same university.

Léa was on secondment to the London office of BCLP for five months in 2024.

Enforcement of judgments between France and England

Being able to enforce a judgment is of crucial importance for businesses: securing a judgment is a pyrrhic victory unless it can be enforced. Here we explore whether concerns about the recognition and enforcement procedure between France and England can now be laid to rest. Our answer is that for commercial and finance parties, the answer is to a large degree, yes.
