Rent Now, Pay Later? FTC Warns Property Management Software Companies to Make Sure Their Advertised Prices Are Accurate

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has issued warning letters to thirteen property management software providers notifying them that their pricing practices may violate consumer protection and antitrust laws. The warning letters reflect a larger movement towards enforcing consumer protection and antitrust laws against all types of pricing algorithm providers and users. Clients should consider reviewing their pricing programs with antitrust and consumer protection counsel to ensure compliance amidst growing enforcement scrutiny.
