Biography

Marissa Cohen is a Commercial Real Estate associate with experience advising clients on regulatory, transactional, and dispute-related matters. She has counseled clients on complex contractual and compliance issues, including matters involving broker-dealer regulations, FINRA regulatory considerations, and industry-specific requirements. Prior to that, she managed a high-volume caseload, represented clients in court proceedings, and negotiated resolutions across a broad range of legal matters.

Before entering the legal profession, Marissa worked in the Banking and Capital Markets practice at PricewaterhouseCoopers, where she conducted audits, analyzed financial statements and investment structures, and advised on accounting and regulatory issues. Her combined legal and accounting background provides a practical perspective on business, financial, and regulatory challenges.
