The claim followed on from a Decision of the European Commission which exposed a long standing and secretive cartel. National Grid claimed damages due to overcharges made by the cartelists who supplied National Grid with Gas Insulated Switchgear, a major component for power substations. The case was described by the Financial Times as the biggest cartel damages action to surface in the English courts. The case was recognised with a number of high-profile industry awards including Global Competition Review's Cartel Prosecution Litigation of the Year 2015.
- Acted on behalf of a hedge fund in its successful defence of an application by a minority of limited partners seeking the winding up of an exempted limited partnership established in the Cayman Islands. An extremely high profile case, followed by a negotiated settlement, which led to the introduction of compulsory insurance being put in place by FIFA at these tournaments.
- Acted for an AIM listed investment company against an investment company in successfully obtaining an apology, retraction of false allegations and recall of a report the investment company had prepared and distributed. The false allegations concerned suggestions of corporate misfeasance by the client which as well as being defamatory and highly damaging, it also threatened to potentially undermine its ability to move to full list.
