The greenwashing trap is set for landlords and tenants

Climate change presents a series of risks and opportunities for companies across the board. Increasingly they are being put on the spot to demonstrate that they have these things in hand and have a credible plan. Against this backdrop, the energy efficiency of buildings that companies own or occupy is an important area to have, and to be seen to have, a holistic strategy for. Dangers lurk for companies whose approach is found to be wanting.
